More to explore

These slides show questions from the Canadian Voting and Policy Attitudes dataset on which Canadian opinion changed notably over time. Figures are weighted shares of respondents who gave an answer, computed with the `cvpa` R package. Points are survey years; where the line crosses a long gap, no surveys asked the question in between.

Some questions were asked by different survey organizations at different times. Part of a change between two surveys can come from differences between the surveys themselves, so changes within a single source are the safest to interpret.
